

Notification of a program in teach out

The Australian Psychology Accreditation Council Limited (APAC) is the accreditation authority for psychology programs in Australia. All programs accredited by APAC are assessed against the Accreditation Standards for Psychology Programs \(2019\).

This form is for education providers to submit to place an existing accredited program of study in teach out mode or to notify APAC that no students remain in a taught-out program.

On receipt of the form, APAC may request further information on the teach out arrangements from the education provider in order to review the program's compliance with the Accreditation Standards.

APAC Rule 2.8 Discontinued programs

Where a program's teach out period extends beyond the end of its current accreditation cycle, the program is required to be accredited until all students have either completed or transitioned out. Where a program continues to be taught after the expiry of its accreditation, then the program will have a status of Accreditation Revoked. Any students completing the program while the program's accreditation has been revoked will be deemed to have graduated from a program that is not accredited.
